LAWRENCE, Kansas, Nov. 9, 1856. The twenty young men convicted of manshughter the other day, are sentenced to five years imprisonment, two of which to hard labor, by Judge Lecompte, are to be put upon the capitol building in a few days, and at night to wear a chain and ball attached to their feet.

While in Lecompton, yesterday, I called the few and the Government by the few and the few upon the Governor at his office; he has but recently returned from Southern Kansas, and reports that the invading marauders have left the settlements where they have been committing many depredations for several weeks past, and have gone into Missouri. Only one settlement is now trou-bled with them, and that is in the vicinity of Fort Scott, where a party of robbers from Arkansas have been stealing all they could lay their hands on. The Governor had ordered a company of troops to be stationed there to drive them out.

He expresses himself delighted with the territory. Several persons were in the ofed into a conversation with me, denouncing some of the Lawrence people for showing no disposition to do him justice; to give him charges made against them by his Excel-lency, and stated his belief, that they were disposed to give him credit for all his acts seemed disposed to charge upon the people of this city a disposition to disregard his acts in their favor, and to take no notice of them.

At this time, Wm. Stephens, Esq., of Mansfield, Ohio, now engaged as counsel for the prisoners, informed the Governor that Haves the murderer of Buffum, had been admitted to bail by judge Lecompte. A free State man present remarked, "There, that is it. This is the one-sided justice we are accustomed to have here

The Governor, exceedingly perplexed and astonished that this cowardly murderer had been released on bail, expressed himself in an emphatic and eloquent manner proceeded to state the following: "How in the devil could that man be released on within twenty-four hours; and I will report it to the world with my name attachmurder ever committed. The murdered man was a poor cripple. All he said was, Don't take my horses,' and he was shot right under my eyes, as charged by the free State men. And still the assassin has been admitted to bail. It is an outrage. He shall again be arrested and tried. I say it openly to all concerned. I care not what lawyers or judges are present. I would say it if Lecompte was here, him-

Col. H. J. Titus then remarked that perhaps the man was innocent of the charge alleged against him.

"Then he should have been discharged," thundered the Governor. "How can a murderer be admitted to bail? He has had no trial; the Grand Jury found a true bill against him, and he has had no trial. It is an outrage. It is enough to make one's hair stand on end. I will publish it to the world. I will make the Senate tingle. It is an outrage. No free State man could have been admitted to bail; he would be now in prison. I am Governor, and this Haves shall be arrested and have his trial?"

tered the room. The Governor asked, "How is it Jones about this man Haves?" "Oh," said Jones, "he has been admitted to bail. I am one of his bondsmen." "What is the amount?" again asked the "Ten thousand dollars," replied Jones.

He is a good fellow." "There it is, gentlemen." said the Governor. "It is an outrage. I am determined to investigate the matter."

A Free State man then ventured to remark that this was the course pursued towards the Free State men ever since the organization of the Territory; that partiality had marked every move made by the governmental officials for the

the fathful discharge of his duty."

The Marshal soon reported himself, and his excellency, turning towards him said: "Mr. Marshal, I shall expect you to re-arrest this man Hayes without a moment's de-lay; proceed immediately, and I shall hold you strictly responsible for the faithful discharge of your duty. By G—d, sir, this man shall be brought here and tried, if it shall require the military arm of the Government. Free State men now in that guard House might have asked in vain, sir, to have been bailed, upon charges in fineitely less criminal, while this man Hayes, who has been guilty of a most atrocious and diabolical murder, right under my eyes,

The Marshal was astonished, and hardly knew what to say; at last he sat down and they must pacify him if possible, the judge have everything their own way.

All the time the Governer paced his offfice floor with hurried steps, exclaiming every now and then in sentences denouncing the act of the officials in releasing a Brother from his labors amongst us.
